The above pre-qualification has two advantages:

- 6 stars is a very difficult milestone to achieve. There are only a handful of products that can lay claim to it. Camera RAW, DivX Pro, ZoomBrowser EX, iPod Video Converter,

You may have seen it before, but I have to mention it here, for it does have quite an interesting backstory. As a matter of fact, RED Digital Cinema cameras are extremely close to this era of technology. And so is the RED Helium Shuttle. The reason it is a separate category is that it differs from other products in that it is a camera designed for panning shots, while users are accustomed to only being able to navigate their images horizontally on a viewer. So, Adobe created this camera app and it takes full advantage of the panoramic mode, which accelerates the process of navigating through all views of an image. The concept behind this app is brilliant, but I believe it could be even better if Adobe focused on software optimization for their products. There are two main features that make this app stand out:

- Panoramic photo stitching. I do not see any other apps use what my understanding is that they use the same technology RED uses. In effect, the app takes the raw images, combines them for you and lets you navigate around the "raw" panoramic image. It's not a fully automatic mode, nonetheless, you can now pan around this entire image with ease and get a good idea of it, while the software will fill the missing shots in as you pan. Then you can export whatever poses you like.
